WALKING TOUR

This walking tour starts from point number 1 on this map. When you arrive at each point read the description of the sight. You can find information about each sight on the following pages.

While walking around the city please remind the students to:

- Cross the road using the designated pedestrian crossings at all times
- Be aware of the surroundings: other pedestrians, cyclists and vehicles
- Follow the Group Leader and the PLUS Staff member at all times

You will have the chance to discover and admire many of the most beautiful and important sights of this city.

POINT 1: BIG BEN

Big Ben is the clock tower at the north end of the Palace of Westminster, or more commonly known as Houses of Parliament. Big Ben is only a nick name and it is actually called the Elizabeth Tower or the Clock Tower. Big Ben is the name given to the largest bell in the tower, also known as the Great Bell, but because Big Ben has become much more recognisable it has become more commonly used.

Big Ben chimes every 15 minutes and can be heard up to a 5 mile radius. The clock's time is adjusted every year with an old British penny. If the clock is fast, a penny is added to the pendulum, and if the clock is slow, one is removed.

On the other side of the River Thames you can see the London Eye. At 135 meters, which is the same as 64 red telephone boxes, the London Eye is the tallest observation wheel in the world and on a clear day you can see as far as 40 kilometres in all directions. There are 32 capsules on the wheel and they represent the 32 boroughs in London. However, the capsules are numbered 1-32 because for superstitious reasons the number 13 has been left out. The capsules go about 26cm per second and it takes around 30 minutes to complete a full rotation. The London Eye has 3.5 million visitors a year, which is more than the Taj Mahal and the Great Pyramids.

POINT 2: HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT

The Houses of Parliament, also known as the Palace of Westminster or Westminster Palace is the meeting place of the two houses of the Parliament of the United Kingdom—the House of Lords and the House of Commons. The Houses of Parliament contains over 1,100 rooms, 100 staircases and 4.8 kilometres of passageways, which are spread over four floors.

The Lord's Chamber is where the House of Lords meets and it is the most lavishly decorated room in the Palace. Members of Parliament meet in the Commons Chamber which is decorated in green, which goes back over 300 years. The only Member of Parliament allowed to eat or drink in the Chamber is the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who can have an alcoholic drink while delivering the budget.

Bombings and other violent events have played a prominent role in the history of the Palace. In 1812 Prime Minister at the time, Spencer Percival was assassinated in the palace. In 1885 a bomb severely damaged the Common Chamber and seriously injured three. And in the 1970s two bombs exploded in the Palace injuring and killing politicians.

POINT 3: WESTMINSTER ABBEY

Westminster Abbey is one of the most notable religious buildings in London and it has been around since the 7th Century. It is a place of royal importance, a place of coronations, weddings, and funerals. Throughout its long history, it has accumulated many interesting stories, facts, and persons.

The latest royal wedding held in the Abbey was when Prince William married Kate Middleton, but the Abbey has been the sight of many royal weddings before the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge's wedding. Over 3000 famous people have been buried in the Abbey, including Charles Darwin and Charles Dickens. In the abbey's museum you can see the lifelike figures of many British kings and queens. At one time these were displayed at funerals and on tombs. Almost every British monarch has been crowned on the Abbey's famous Coronation Chair. The Chair has graffiti from schoolboys and visitors during the 18th and 19th centuries.

POINT 4: 10 DOWNING STREET

10 Downing Street is probably one of the most well known addresses in the world. It is the home of the Prime Minister. The brass letter box on the famous black front door is still engraved with the title of First Lord of the Treasury which dates back to the first Prime Minister Sir Robert Walpole.

No 10 Downing Street is one of the most heavily guarded buildings in Britain. The front door cannot be opened from the outside because it has no handle, and no one can enter the building without passing through a scanner and a set of security gates manned by armed guards.

The building is 300 years old contains 100 rooms. Number 10 has 3 different functions. It is the official residence of the British Prime Minister: it is their office, and it is also the place where the Prime Minister entertains guests from Her Majesty The Queen to presidents of the United States and other world leaders.

POINT 5: HORSE GUARDS

Horse Guards is in front of the Horse Guards Parade. The buildings of Horse Guards were designed by William Kent and they were completed in 1755. It was originally the main entrance to Buckingham Palace and some royal processions still pass under the arches of the building.

Nowadays the Horse Guards has been the headquarters for administering all regular and Territorial Army units in Greater London. Every day there is a Guard Changing Ceremony and it is performed by the Queen's Life Guard. The Queen's Life Guard are the mounted troopers of the Household Cavalry who guard the official entrance to St James's Palace and Buckingham Palace outside Horse Guards in Whitehall.

The Queen takes the salute of the Trooping of The Colour ceremony on her official birthday on the parade ground.

POINT 6: TRAFALGAR SQUARE & NATIONAL GALLERY

Trafalgar square was built to commemorate Admiral Nelson and it was named after the Spanish Cape Trafalgar where his last battle, The Battle of Trafalgar, was won. Trafalgar Square is a site of significant historic value and its monuments and statues also have individual heritage classifications. The centrepiece of the square is the statue of Nelson Column and it was built to honour admiral Horatio Nelson. There are four plinths in the square, 3 of which features statues of previous British Kings. The fourth plinth, however, never had a statue built for it. It has been turned into a public display of modern art that rotates regularly.

Since its construction in the early 1800s, Trafalgar Square has been seen as a centre of national democracy and protest. Rallies and demonstrations are frequently held at weekends on a range of political, religious and general issues. The Mayor supports this democratic tradition, and gives access to the square for such causes.

It is illegal to feed the pigeons in Trafalgar Square due to worries about the health risks posed by the pigeons the Mayor of London banned feeding them.

The National Gallery occupies the north side of the square. The gallery has had over 4.5million visitors every year. In the gallery you can see art by various artists including Monet, Rembrandt, Vermeer and Van Gogh. There are 2300 works of art displayed in the gallery.

From the outset the National Gallery has been committed to education. Students have always been admitted to the Gallery to study the collection, and to make copies of the pictures. A vibrant education programme continues today for school children, students, and the general public. The programme includes free public lectures, tours and seminars.

POINT 7: THE MALL & ST JAMES`S PARK

The Mall was originally created as a ceremonial route and during state visits the monarch and the visiting heads of state were, and still are, escorted up the mall in a state carriage and the street is decorated with flags. It is a grand professional route from Her Majesty's residence, Buckingham Palace, to the Admiralty Arch. The Arch may look like a monument but it is actually an office block with rooms inside. It was built to commemorate the death of Queen Victoria.

St. James's Park is the oldest of the Royal Parks of London. It is surrounded by three palaces, Westminster, St James's Palace and Buckingham Palace.

The Diana Princess of Wales Memorial Walk, which passes places that figured in the life of the princess, goes through the park.

POINT 8: BUCKINGHAM PALACE

Buckingham Palace is the official London residence of Her Majesty The Queen. It has been the official residence of Britain's sovereigns since 1837 and evolved from a town house to the grand palace it is today. Areas of Buckingham Palace are opened to visitors on a regular basis.

The palace has 775 rooms, including 19 state rooms, 52 royal and guest bedrooms, 188 staff bedrooms, 92 offices and 78 bathrooms. Its rooms and corridors contain one of the world's greatest art collections. The palace also has its own chapel, post office, movie theatre and swimming pool. The Queen and The Duke of Edinburgh live in the private apartments on the north side of the Palace. The principal State Rooms are used for court ceremonies and official entertaining rooms occupy the main west block facing the gardens.

POINT 9: PICCADILLY CIRCUS

Piccadilly Circus is a famous road junction and public space of London's West End in the City of Westminster, built in 1819 to connect Regent Street with the major shopping street of Piccadilly. In this context, a circus, from the Latin word meaning "circle", is a round open space at a street junction.

The Circus is particularly known for its video display and neon signs mounted on the corner building on the northern side, as well as the Shaftesbury memorial fountain and statue of an archer popularly known as Eros. It is surrounded by several noted buildings, including the London Pavilion and Criterion Theatre.

POINT 10: LEICESTER SQUARE

Leicester Square is the centre of London's cinema land. It is claimed that the Square contains the cinema with the largest screen and the cinema with the most seats (over 1600). The square is the prime location in London for major film premières and has seen the likes of James Bond films and animation films such as Shrek. The square is surrounded by floor mounted plaques with film stars names and cast handprints.

You will have the chance to discover and admire many of the most beautiful and important sights of London.

POINT 1: SHAKESPEARE'S GLOBE

The Shakespeare's Globe was founded by an American actor and director Sam Wanamaker and it is dedicated to the exploration of Shakespeare's work. Together with the Globe Exhibition & Tour and Globe Education, the Globe Theatre seeks to further the experience and international understanding of Shakespeare in performance.

The original Globe, designed in 1599, was a few hundred yards from its current site. The rebuilt open-air playhouse founded by Sam Wanamaker was opened for performances in 1997.

Today in the Globe Theatre you can see Shakespeare's plays such as Romeo & Juliet, Macbeth, The Merchant of Venice and many more.

POINT 2: TOWER BRIDGE (view from London Bridge)

Tower Bridge was built 120 years ago to ease road traffic but still maintaining river access to the London docks. The Bridge has giant movable roadways that lift up for passing ships. It is required to raise to provide access for registered ships of 30 feet or taller free of charge with 24 hour notice. It is available anytime for 365 days of the year. The Bridge is raised around 850 times in a year.

In 1952 a London bus 78 had to leap from one side to the other because the bridge began to rise whilst the bus was still on it.

Inside the Bridge there is the Tower Bridge Exhibition where you can learn about how one of the world's most famous bridge works and about the history of the Bridge.

POINT 3: ST PAUL'S CATHEDRAL

St Paul's Cathedral was originally built in 604AD, however, the current cathedral is the fourth one that has been built. The now standing Cathedral was built between 1675 and 1710. The Cathedral was destroyed twice by fires and once by Vikings, however, it did survive World War II.

Many important events have been held at the Cathedral, such as the funerals of Sir Winston Churchill, Duke of Wellington and Lord Nelson, the wedding of Prince Charles to Lady Diana Spencer and most recently the service for 80th Birthday of Her Majesty the Queen.

There is a Whispering Gallery in the Cathedral where you can hear a whisper on the other side of the dome, 112 feet away. The dome is 366 feet high and it is the second largest in the world.

POINT 4: BRITISH MUSEUM

British Museum was founded in 1753 by Sir Hans Sloane (he also invented chocolate milk), but it was opened to the public in 1759. The museum's collection contains at least 8 million objects, but only 1%, or 80 000, of these objects are on display at the same time in the 194 designated store rooms. The collection in the Museum spans over two million years of human history.

A few great attractions in the Museum are; the Great Court, which has a reading room in the middle of the court yard and looks more like an old fashion library, the Rosetta Stone, Elgin Marbles and the Egyptian mummies.

The Museum is intended to be a place where humane cross-cultural investigation can happen.

POINT 5: COVENT GARDEN

Covent Garden gets its name from a convent/monastery that used to locate the spot. The name is actually a spelling mistake, as it used to be a market for the convent. Ever since 1600's there has been some kind of a market in Covent Garden, but the current market was built in the 1830's. It was London's central fruit and vegetable market for 140 years.

Covent Garden is usually used to describe the Covent Garden Market, but Covent Garden is actually an entire neighbourhood in London.

- Cross the road using the designated pedestrian crossings at all times
- Be aware of the surroundings: other pedestrians, cyclists and vehicles
- Follow the Group Leader and the PLUS Staff member at all times

You will have the chance to discover and admire many of the most beautiful and important sights of this city.

POINT 1: CLARENDON BUILDING

The Clarendon Building was built in the early 18th century to house the Oxford University Press. This Grade I listed building was named after Lord Clarendon who wrote the History of the Great Rebellion and some of the profits from the book was used to pay for the building. In the 19th century the building was used as a police station for a few years until it became the registry for the University of Oxford. The building is owned by the University of Oxford, and it is now part of the close by Bodleian library. Today the building is used as office and meeting space for senior members of staff as well as the Bodleian library's admissions department and the Victorian County History of Oxfordshire.

POINT 2: THE SHELDONIAN THEATRE

The Sheldonian Theatre was built in 1668, and it was named after Gilbert Sheldon, the University Chancellor at the time. The building has a prominent eight-sided cupola in the centre of the roof. The cupola is accessible via a staircase leading to the dome over the main ceiling. The cupola has large windows on all sides, providing views across central Oxford. The roof is made up of a series of timber supports and complicated cross beams. The Theatre is the official ceremonial hall of the University of Oxford. It is the place where students are admitted to the University, where they receive their degree and it is the meeting place for the Congregations, the University's parliament. The Theatre can also be hired for music concerts, lectures, talks and other events.

POINT 3: RADCLIFFE CAMERA

The Radcliffe Camera was built in the 18th century to house the Radcliffe Science Library. The building and the square are named after John Radcliffe who was a student at the University of Oxford and later became doctor to the King. The distinctive circular dome of the structure makes the Radcliffe Camera one of the most recognisable and photographed buildings in Oxford and it is the earliest example in England of a circular library. Today the Camera contains reading rooms used by undergraduates at the University. It is connected to the Old Library with a subway housing an underground book-storage. The Radcliffe Square, where the Radcliffe Camera stands, is widely regarded as the most beautiful square in Oxford.

POINT 4: UNIVERSITY CHURCH OF ST MARY THE VIRGIN

The University Church of St Mary the Virgin is the largest of Oxford's parish churches and it is the centre from which the University of Oxford grew. In the early 13th century when the University started to develop as scholars and teachers moved into halls of residence in Oxford, they needed a central meeting place and they came to the Church. It was used for academic lectures as well as Christian services. Even the University's court, treasury and library were housed in the Church for a while. By the 15th century the Church had become too small for these activities and the University moved its lectures, library and official ceremonies to other buildings nearby. The importance of the Church did not diminish and it is still a site for major events within the University. The Church has one of the most beautiful spires in England and eccentric baroque porch. The 62 meter tower dates back to the 13th century and houses a 124 step staircase.

POINT 5: THE QUEEN'S COLLEGE

The Queen's College was founded in 1341 as the 'Hall of the Queen's Scholars at Oxford'. It was established as a residence for fellows, chaplains 'poor boys' and various officials and servants. Initially Queen's was poor but the funding and quality slowly grew. In the 15th century preference for people was from Cumberland and Westmorland, and made the College a community of north-westerners. During Queen Elizabeth's reign it became one of the most popular colleges at Oxford and the funding for the College grew even more. In the 18th century the medieval College was entirely rebuilt so that the Queen's was the only Oxford College to be housed entirely in Baroque buildings. Since the 19th century the College has developed a strong academic reputation, whole solid funding and wise management have made it secure and successful. Although candidates from all possible backgrounds are welcomed and northerners no longer have preference, the College still remains conscious of its history and traditions and values its ancient links to the North of England.

POINT 6: MERTON COLLEGE

Merton College turned 750 last year, and it is the first fully self-governing College in the University of Oxford. The College was originally founded for twenty fellows, but when a former fellow endowed a number of scholarships known as postmasterships, undergraduates were also formally being admitted to the College. Merton College houses the Mob Library, which is the oldest continuously functioning library for university academics and students in the world. Over the centuries many notable scholars and cultural leaders have called Merton home, including JRR Tolkien who was a professor at Merton at the time the first volume of The Lord of the Rings was published. The College got its first female lecturer in 1966 and in 1980 the first female students were admitted to Merton. The College houses the Turf Tavern, an establishment beloved of generations of Oxford students and some of its real life patrons have included Oscar Wilde, Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton and Stephen Hawking.

POINT 7: CHRIST CHURCH

Christ Church is one of the largest colleges in the University of Oxford, and it is the Cathedral Church for the Diocese of Oxford. The College was originally founded in 1524 as Cardinal's College on the site of an old monastery, but it became property of King Henry VIII only five years later. He re-founded the College twenty years later and appointed the old monastery church as the cathedral of the new diocese of Oxford. Many distinguished people have studied at Christ Church including philosopher John Locke, Albert Einstein, and also 13 Prime Ministers. The College also has a world famous Cathedral Choir; scholarly collections of books and art and much more. Today Christ Church is a vibrant academic community with about 425 undergraduate students and 250 graduate students. There are also around 100 teaching and research staff who are senior members of the College.
